Theodore Dodson of Sardis, one of Uncle Sam's soldier boys, recently stationed at Galveston, is here and will soon join the forces in the Philippines.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville Huff of Little Sioux, La., who have been visiting his brother, Mr. Albert N. Huff of Huntington, W. Va., are spending a few days in Maysville and vicinity visiting his cousin, Mr. Charles T. Huff, and other relatives and friends.

THERE SHOULD BE SOMETHING DONE TO RELIEVE CONDITIONS IN EAST THIRD STREET.

Residents of Third street, east of Lexington street, are up against a proposition. A large pile of dirt alongside the warehouse completely covers the sidewalks, or place used as one, and if the people on Third street get in or out they have to use the railroad as a footway, and a little daughter of one of the residents Wednesday came very near being caught by a freight train. The obstruction should be moved at once, before some one gets injured.

NO PEACE PRIZE.

MISSIONARY LETTER

Mrs. Van Cleave Writes of Her Experiences in China—Vivid Picture of Conditions There.

Mrs. Mina Van Cleave Buck, the missionary in Lu Chow Fu, whom the Mason county Christian churches are supporting as their "Living Link," writes her first impressions of China as follows:

In order to comprehend the full significance of the Chinese, of which you have often heard people speak, just land in Shanghai on Friday, the 13th of March, with a drizzling rain falling and the wind blowing at the rate of 60 miles an hour, seemingly direct from the North Pole. Such was my experience. I really thought they had made a mistake and taken me to Greenland. Until I looked around and saw green fields and blooming flowers. Then I suddenly realized that it was merely the damp atmosphere that was penetrating to the marrow of my bones. The people who have endured it for a few seasons tell me that I will become accustomed to it. Perhaps I will. Again, it was difficult for me to realize that I was in far away China, for in Shanghai the street cars and automobiles are as much in evidence as they are in any American city. However, when I reached Wuhu and took a Chinese launch, I was quite aware that something different had appeared. To be crowded with thirty pieces of baggage into a little six by six room with nothing but boards to sit on, no windows for ventilation or light, and the curious Chinese ever gazing in at the two by two door, made me realize fully that I was having a new experience. The launch was interesting, but the sailboat that we had to take at Chao Hsien was more so, for the waters were so low that we had to have three water buffaloes to pull us over the mud of the river—the most peculiar sleigh-ride that I have ever had. I tried to make a picture of it but one of the buffalo drivers screamed until I had to stop. He said it would kill him to have his picture taken. Another interesting way of travel is by chair. The roads are very winding, from one to three feet wide, and built up sometimes several feet above the fields. In going around a sharp corner you can imagine how one feels suspended over a precipice in midair.

While I was deeply impressed by the crude methods of travel, I was just as greatly surprised by some of the beautiful sights. I came to China with the idea that there is nothing beautiful here, but I happily find that my idea was wrong. I can imagine nothing more beautiful than the fields of yellow blossoming rape among the fields of various shades of green—all in far greater splendor in many respects than anything I have ever seen in America.

I feel that people in the homelands are given a very distorted notion of conditions here. I can remember when I had a very distinct mental picture of how the person who became a missionary sacrificed everything and went to the field to live in a hovel. Far from it; the missionaries have good comfortable homes here, in fact, much better than many of our parsonages in the homeland. There are inconveniences, to be sure, but I feel that that side of the question is over-emphasized and consequently many who might otherwise be attracted to the foreign fields as workers remain at home where the need is far less great. Of course, there are sights, odors and sounds that are very disturbing—especially to the pre-conceived notions of the homeland. To see the beggars lying along the streets rolled in a piece of filthy matting and calling in such pitiful tones certainly makes one's heart ache. But we expect such conditions, that is why we are here—to help them raise the standard of living. It all makes me exceedingly anxious for the time to come when I can have an actual part in the uplifting of this people.

JACK ORR SEES THINGS.

Thursday morning as Foreman Jack Orr of The Ledger Printery was coming down to work he met a man with two wooden legs, and that's no joke. A man with one wooden leg is a common sight, but a pair off is some item.

Those coming out west or back east—you don't hear from them so often now. You each have new friends, new interests. But after all, blood is thicker than water and your picture and pictures of the other members of your family would be welcomed by them—especially for Christians.

TAX ASSESSMENT VOID

If Payer Is Not Notified After He Makes Return, Court Rules.

Frankfort.—An assessment made by the assessor of a county or the Board of Supervisors after a taxpayer had duly returned his assessment and without notice to the taxpayer is void. The Court of Appeals so held in affirming the judgment of the Kenton Circuit Court in the case of John T. Boske against Louis Marx, Simon Marx and others.

A new trial was ordered in the case of Nora Childers against the Commonwealth, reversing the Knox Circuit Court. She was charged with having killed her husband and had been convicted of manslaughter. The admission of incompetent evidence caused the reversal.

The Woman's Club will meet this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. All urged to attend.

MRS. W. F. POWER

"THE LAUGHTER OF THE SOUL AT ITSELF"

Lecture By Rev. R. L. Benn Last Night

Subject of Discussion Drawn

From the Great Moral of

Hugo's Famous Tragedy

"Les Miserables."

Many of the great classics hold sermons in disguise and it is the developing of these in earnestness and power as well as the scholarly discussions of the works themselves which are attracting literary people to hear the Rev. R. L. Benn in his able course of lectures this winter.

In the graphic recital of the story, the meaning of his subject appeared when Jean Valjean was brought face to face with the question whether or not he would declare his identity. After a process of reasoning on the hardships of the galleys, on his good work as a philanthropist and how he was making money and doing good with it, he decided not to reveal it but allow another to go to prison under false accusation. Upon reaching this decision he heard an internal burst of laughter which resounded in his soul until his final yielding to the demands of conscience and his choice of the right.

"The Laughter of the Soul At Itself" is the conclusion of irony, of fear, of despair which sends cold shivers through all the nerves, causes a strange perspiration to stand on the forehead, makes one hear another voice, and quail even when in solitude. This part of the subject was illustrated by scenes from Shakespeare, Hawthorne, Tennyson and the Bible.

The converse of "The Soul's Laughter At Itself" is the soul's benediction upon itself; the light, the bliss of an approving conscience which was illustrated by the generous and noble acts of Jean Valjean.

Among the lessons were these two providential productions through human instruments, and right of conscience in which lies the hope of self-respect, the hope of society, the hope of continued idealism, the hope of heroes and heroines.

Reverence for conscience, the voice of God in the soul, conduces to all purity, to all noble acts of self-sacrifice, and to that lofty destiny which leads by Calvary, through the gates of death where one stands undazzled before the throne of the Highest.

21,976 FORDS SOLD IN SEPTEMBER

The Ford Motor Co. announces that in the month of September there were sold and delivered 21,976 Ford cars. This was a gain of 11,479 cars over September 1913. This is significant not only because it shows that the Ford production is rapidly being increased to meet the stupendous influx of orders, but also because it demonstrates that the Ford Motor Company is maintaining the 300,000 car-schedule necessary to give Ford purchasers between August 1st, 1914 and August 1st, 1915, a share of Ford profits.

We have just received a car-load of the new 1915 models, and can give you immediate delivery. There's nothing to gain by waiting, so order now and enjoy your car this fall and winter.
